aotearoa new zealand is frequently viewed as the most advanced country in the world when it comes to reconciliation processes between the state and its colonised indigenous people the fact that this book s contributions are written by scholars who are all engaged in such processes is alone testament to this alone but despite all that has been achieved the processes need to be critically evaluated this book offers an up to date analysis of the reconciliation processes between māori and the crown by leading and emerging scholars in the field it is the first attempt to grasp the link between contemporary politics the notion of activist research and historical and anthropological analysis the argument this collection is based on is that reconciliation processes are manifested in much more than government policies legal decisions and law making both research and political efforts fully involve indigenous scholars legal and historical academics communities tribes engaged pākehā settlers and immigrants of european descent and national institutions among other things such negotiation processes are tangibly represented by new rituals by open and media streamed debates and by public institutions such as the waitangi tribunal this book brings together leading indigenous and allied thinkers practitioners and advocates to address the critical issue of the right of reply in archives foregrounding truth telling cultural safety and indigenous sovereignty across glam institutions collecting institutions have shaped and maintained records produced by colonial systems of administration and continue to play a role in perpetuating colonial paradigms that are inherently resistant to the needs and priorities of indigenous peoples against this backdrop this book embarks on a scholarly investigation into the concept known as the right of reply this concept speaks to indigenous peoples right to update correct critique or enhance indigenous knowledge that is held in collecting institutions spanning creative responses case studies policy critiques and international perspectives the volume explores how the right of reply operates as a political and ethical imperative in the work of archives contributors examine indigenous led protocols the impact of colonial recordkeeping digital repatriation metadata annotation and structural transformation in australia aotearoa and the united states the volume offers a blueprint for decolonising archives and centring indigenous agency illuminating the innovative strategies being implemented across institutional and community settings it is essential reading for archivists curators scholars and anyone committed to transforming glam practice from the signing of the treaty of waitangi between indigenous and settler cultures to the emergence of the first ever state funded māori television network new zealand has been a hotbed of indigenous concerns given its history of colonization coping with biculturalism is central to new zealand life much of this bicultural drama plays out in the media and is molded by an anxiety surrounding the ongoing struggle over citizenship rights that is seated within the politics of recognition the fourth eye brings together indigenous and non indigenous scholars to provide a critical and comprehensive account of the intricate and complex relationship between the media and māori culture examining the indigenous mediascape the fourth eye shows how māori filmmakers actors and media producers have depicted conflicts over citizenship rights and negotiated the representation of indigenous people from nineteenth century māori language newspapers to contemporary māori film and television the contributors explore a variety of media forms including magazine cover stories print advertisements commercial images and current māori language newspapers to illustrate the construction expression and production of indigeneity through media focusing on new zealand as a case study the authors address the broader question what is indigenous media while engaging with distinct themes such as the misrepresentation of māori people in the media access of indigenous communities to media technologies and the use of media for activism the essays in this much needed new collection articulate an indigenous media landscape that converses with issues that reach far beyond new zealand contributors sue abel u of auckland joost de bruin victoria u of wellington suzanne duncan u of otago kevin fisher u of otago allen meek massey u lachy paterson u of otago chris prentice u of otago jay scherer u of alberta jo smith victoria u of wellington april strickland stephen turner u of auckland what is a new zealand what does it mean to be a citizen of or a resident in this country how do we understand what makes new zealand complex and unique and what creates a sense of belonging and identity both here and in the world now s a critical time to be thinking about these sorts of things in a post trump post brexit world easy slogans have taken the place of reasoning and reasonableness empathy is in retreat and intolerance is on the march history tells us that this is never a good mix in this engaging book experts and thinkers direct their sharp analysis at these and other important issues written for university students it will appeal to anyone interested in where we have come from and where we are headed it s a book for active participants in aotearoa new zealand and in global society a search for new ways to talk about race in aotearoa new zealand brought together this powerful group of scholars writers and activists for these authors attempts to confront racism and racial violence often stall against a failure to see how power works through race across our modern social worlds the result is a country where racism is all
