illustrated by case studies from both smaller nations such as carriacou barbados and st lucia and larger countries including cuba mexico and jamaica this volume brings together leading writers concerned with environmental planning in the caribbean to provide an interdisciplinary contemporary critical overview they argue that context is central to the practice of environmental planning in this region rather than focusing on a deterministic colonial geography and history this volume proposes that whilst a wide range of foreign planning influences can be felt in different contexts environmental planning emerges in specific settings through the fluid interaction between local and global relations of power thus a number of chapters explore the effects of external discourses upon the region while others examine discourses on the us style democracy and on tourism power and inequality are realities that planners of all kinds must face in the practical world in planning in the face of power john forester argues that effective public serving planners can overcome the traditional but paralyzing dichotomies of being either professional or political detached and distantly rational or engaged and change oriented because inequalities of power directly structure planning practice planners who are blind to relations of power will inevitably fail forester shows how in the face of the conflict ridden demands of practice planners can think politically and rationally at the same time avoid common sources of failure and work to advance both a vision of the broader public good and the interests of the least powerful members of society this book is about an art in which the netherlands excels strategic planning foreign observers will need little convincing of the merits of dutch planning they will want to know whether routine explanations small country industrious disciplined people hardened by the perennial fight against the sea hold any water and they will want to know where to look for the bag of tricks of dutch planners dutch readers need to be convinced first that planning in the netherlands is indeed effective before contemplating how this has come about our message for both is that to the extent that dutch planners do live in what others are inclined to see as a planners paradise it is a paradise carefully constructed and maintained by the planners themselves this smacks of bernard shaw describing a profession as a conspiracy against laity however all knowledge and all technologies are socially constructed meaning that they are the products of people or groups pursuing often conflicting aims and coming to arrangements about what is to pass as true and good so this takes away the odium of dutch planners having their own agenda positioning ourselves we are in the business of interpreting dutch planning and at the same time committed to improving it this makes us part of the situation which we describe this situation is characterized by the existence of two divergent traditions urban design and the social science discipline called planologie theory and practice in city planning have never been known for their compatibility the planner dealing with stresses such as the personalities at work in a board meeting and coping with the realities of fund raising political realities and the like can find little guidance in the theory of the trade the issues of poverty groups whether rural or urban the provision of services and the packaging of them are seemingly insuperable the sheer frustration in the inability to deliver which so many planners feel can result in considerable impatience and a questioning of the relevance of theory the editors argue that this state of affairs though understandable is unacceptable while short range meliorism without sense of perspective may be good for the practitioner s individual psyche the cost may be borne by the long run best interests of the groups to be served the risks of a lack of perspective and the experiences generated by this phenomenon are too serious in their implications to permit the process to continue in this new age of anxiety it is essential for both planners and theorists to understand their roles as well as provide guidance in shaping them burchell and sternlieb have thus gathered here a variety of individuals all of whom in their separate and distinct fashions are seasoned both in practice and in theory the book is divided into five sections physical planning in change social planning in change public policy planning in change economic planning in change and a final section detailing the roles of planners and who they are these shared puzzlements and insights will prove useful to all practitioners and theorists in the planning field
